

Youth

A baby blue sky
Hangs over your head
Your mind overflows
With words to be said

For someone so young
Life will be a thrill
A blank, waiting canvas
A notebook to fill

Discover your calling
Then shine like a star
Sing loud enough
And your words will fly far

The world will become
What you want it to be
But today you can run
Barefoot, wild and free

And in those moments
When the road is too wide
The ocean's too deep
The sky is too high

Take baby steps
They grow into strides
Hop, skip and jump
You'll learn how to fly

Time may be fleeting
So don't waste a moment
All you can do
Is step forward and own it

They say youth is wasted
On the stupid and young
Make the most of today
For your life's just begun
